PARENT TEACHER ASSOCIATION (PTA)

Date: 7/12/2025

Session – 2025 -26

PTA is an organization composed of parents and teachers that are committed to promote the welfare of the children at home, school and the community. The purpose of the PTA is to build a strong and close relationship between the home and school for parents and teachers to work together towards a common goal in the education and well-being of children; make every child's potential a reality by engaging and empowering families and communities to advocate for all children.

It aims to support our children's education at St. J B Global Academy by providing memorable student events, worthwhile fundraisers, and social gatherings for parents, teachers and students alike.

The PTA is organized through democratic elections of volunteers. The PTA executives will liaise with the school on planning and carrying out PTA sponsored events. Class parents communicate between the PTA and the parents of their grade level on events organized and/or sponsored by the PTA. Elections are on an annual basis.

We are committed to:

- strengthen students' identity
- forge stronger relationships with people and the environment
- give opportunities for school community members to make an impact on student life

In order to full fill our aims, we:

- Provide fun and educational experiences for the students at the school so that they can grow closer together as a community.
- Enhance the parent community at the school by providing transition events for new families.
- Provide a communication network for student internships and other extra-curricular events sponsored by the school
- Provide a communication link between the teachers, parent body, and student government for school-wide events.

PTA is not involved in school operations, governance, finance or school policy.

Parents may be invited to Committees during times of accreditation self-studies, school visits by accrediting bodies, and as volunteers for events such as the school-wide Literary Festival or Sports Days. These initiatives are separate from PTA-and school agreed collaboration on events for the ST. J B Global Academy children.

Role of Parents Teachers Association

What's an ideal school? A place where students can thrive, teachers receive the support they need, and parents are included in their overall child's education. While it sounds nice, how would we get there? One simple yet very powerful solution is the Parents Teachers Association, otherwise known as the PTA. Whether you are a parent, teacher, or student, it has the potential to make a very real difference that could last and benefit all within the school community.

But what does a PTA actually do, and why is it so important? Let's explore just how PTAs are essential to making the school experience for all participants.

What Is a PTA?

The Parents-Teachers Association is a collaborative association composed of parents and teachers; in some incidents, the students also participate in the association. The main purpose of this body is to establish a bridge between parents and schools, allowing communication and cooperation. It works by ensuring that the scholastic and extra-curricular systems are at work, hence making it easy for the students through the collaboration of the PTA.

Quite different from parent-teacher meetings, which are one-time affairs, PTAs presuppose frequent interaction and a commitment to the school's well-being on a continuing basis. It is where voices can be heard, ideas can interflow, and problems can be solved together.

Why Do Schools Need a PTA?

Schools are like a community that thrives when everyone pitches in PTAs offer a channel through which cooperation takes place, enabling parents and teachers to go the same way.

Think of it this way: while the teacher is in the classroom educating and guiding students for hours, more often than not, a child's parents know them best. These two, put together, create a balanced, informative approach to any one child's development.

Key Roles of a PTA

So, what does a PTA do? Some of the essential things it does are listed below.

Improving Communication

PTAs create a link between parents and schools. They provide a channel for parents to air their grievances and for schools to disseminate information about changes in curriculum, upcoming events, or problems dealing with student behaviour. Whatever it may be, PTAs make sure everyone is on the same page.

Extracurricular Activities' Support

From organising school fairs to planning sports days, many PTAs take on numerous initiatives that make life at school entertaining and interactive. Such activities ensure student participation and even learning outside the classroom.

Raising Funds

The PTAs bring in significant funds for many schools to build libraries, purchase sports equipment, and improve the classrooms. Bake sales, running charities, and even various cultural events are a few of the ways PTAs help enhance a school's resources.

Student Welfare Promotion

PTAs are viable collaborators for teachers in matters concerning bullying, poor mental health, and academic pressure. Such awareness and support will ensure they feel cared for and in a safe environment.

Encouraging Parent Participation

One of the biggest problems most schools face is parental involvement. PTAs ask parents to be more involved in their children's education either by volunteer work, attending meetings, or simply keeping oneself current.

Benefits of a PTA

A well-functioning PTA supports everyone in the school community. Here's how:

For Students

- Better Resources: PTAs often fund projects that directly impact the learning environments themselves, such as new science labs or art supplies.
- More Supportive: Parents and teachers collectively make the students feel far more supported and, therefore, motivated to put in their best efforts.
- Growth Opportunities: Extracurricular events organised by the PTA offer students an avenue to discover and uncover their interests and talents.

For Parents

- Stronger Links: Being part of a PTA helps parents establish their links with other families and the school itself.
- A Voice in Decision-making: PTAs give the parents a voice in decision-making on important issues related to school policy plans and development plans.
- Insight into School Life: Parents are enlightened on what takes place in their child's school, therefore making them involved.

For Teachers

- Extra Helping Hands: Smaller events are often taken care of by PTAs, who help organise, run, and even supply classrooms with necessary supplies.
- Parental Support: When parents and teachers are on the same team, it creates a more positive atmosphere in the classroom.

How PTAs Build Stronger Communities

PTAs are not just about meetings and fundraisers; the concept behind their structure helps knit a sense of community. PTAs bring parents, teachers, and students alike together in a way that makes everyone feel important.

Fostering Inclusivity

PTAs ensure that in each different school setting, all parents, regardless of origin, are made to feel welcome and included. This inclusiveness helps knit a strong relationship between families and IB schools.

Increasing Parent-Teacher Relationships

They develop mutual respect and understanding when parents and teachers interact regularly. Ultimately, students benefit from this relationship as they witness their role models working together in harmony.

Encourage Social Responsibilities

Through community projects and awareness, PTAs teach students to give back. Whether it is a recycling drive or a charity event, it, at an early age, instils a sense of responsibility.

Challenges Faced by PTAs

Like any organisation, PTAs face an equal share of problems. Common ones include:

- Low Participation: It is often hard to get parents to join and remain active in the PTA.
- Conflicting Views: With so many voices, there is sometimes difficulty in reaching one unanimous resolution.
- Limited Resources: Many of the PTAs rely on volunteers and donations from the community base where most of the work is conducted, so it limits its capacity to involve itself with bigger projects.

These can be overcome with good leadership, clear communication, and a shared commitment to the success of the school.

Conclusion

The Parents Teachers Association is not only an organization of parents and teachers but an amalgamation that acts as a backbone in any successful school environment through cooperating in the construction of a platform for advancement where students succeed, parents participate, and teachers can carry on their tasks of teaching with ease.

So, for those of you who have ever wondered how you could make a difference in your child's education, joining the PTA might just be the answer. After all, education is a shared responsibility, and when we all act together, the results are nothing short of extraordinary.
